December 19, 2018

Updates:
Adult Services Librarian Julie Rand signed up 3 new Books on Wheels patrons in November, 2018. She also gave a presentation about the BOW program and other library services to the residents at Presbyterian Homes.

On November 8, Adult Services Librarian Lorena Neal met with Pam Silas, Associate Director, Community Outreach and Engagement, for Northwestern University’s Center for Native American and Indigenous Research. They discussed possibilities for future collaborations between EPL and the Center on programming. The first program to result from this partnership is the exhibit Standing Rock: Photographs of an Indigenous Movement on the third floor of EPL during the month of December, along with a talk by the photographer, Levi Rickert, on December 1. Thanks to Library Assistant Kim Hiltwein for organizing this event with the artist. Lorena plans to attend a future meeting of the Center’s steering committee to discuss additional collaborations and programs going forward.

On November 9, Health & Wellness Literacy Librarian Susan McClelland gave a presentation to incoming HIRCULES Community Health Corps Northwestern Student volunteers, called, Thinking Like a Librarian. The overview focused on conversing with patrons about health issues and using library health databases and wellness resources.

On November 10, 50 people attended the Chicago Quarterly Review Reading featuring seven readers from the latest issue of CQR.

EPL hosted a meeting of the Mayor’s Employer Advisory Council (MEAC) on Thursday, November 29. Business & Financial Literacy Librarian Susan Markwell represents EPL on this council. This is the group of local organizations and businesses which are tasked with increasing awareness among high school students of opportunities for careers in Evanston which do not require a four-year degree. On Thursday, over 50 members of this council gathered at the library to share updates from our site visits to local employers and discuss the next steps for this initiative. Neil Gambow, the chair of this council, thanked the library for allowing the council to use the Community Meeting Room and was very appreciative of our hospitality and participation in this council. Karen Danczak-Lyons provided the introduction and welcome, and Teri Campbell also attended the meeting.

Latino Engagement Librarian Mariana Bojorquez attended the Guadalajara Book Fair with help from an ALA travel stipend award. While there she was able to purchase hundreds of books written in Spanish (not translations) and make some terrific connections with publishers and colleagues.

Client A, learned how to send her first email. Now she is able to open, read and reply to emails.
Client B, who reports being afraid of technology, learned how to send text message from his flip phone and also how to use his LinkedIn account.
Client C created a Photo Album on Snapfish for her son. She wanted to surprise her son with this album on his birthday. The photo album has 50 pictures from when he was a little baby to adulthood.

From an attendee of the History Book Discussion group: “It was a great discussion. Just what I hoped a book club would be.”

An attendee at the November 14 Law At The Library lecture on Starting a Small Business came to the desk afterwards to give the presentation “twelve thumbs up!”

From Mirna, a Patient Medical Advocate who called with questions about our ACA Navigator, “You are a world of knowledge! Thank you for providing this critical service to the community!”
